3. Stan Grogan telephoned to say that a representative for a magazine called Electronic News had telephoned to say that they understood CIA had just bought a big, new, high-speed computer capable of printing 2,400 lines per minute. They wanted to know all about the purchase, what we were going to do with it, etc., etc. I told Stan that we were in the process of acquiring, through rental, an IBM 7090 computer, and this was in all probability what they had referred to. I suggested, however, that we not answer any of the detailed questions.

4. I met with [REDACTED] at which time I agreed to sponsor an Agency party for Colonel Edwards at the Army Navy Country Club on 26 June. (They will handle all of the details.)

5. This morning I asked [REDACTED] and Matt Baird to look at the Broyhill Building with the idea of moving a very substantial part of the Office of Training there. Alan reported that Matt's reaction was quite favorable.

6. I also asked Alan to look at the age and mileage of our executive-type cars and to make sure that any needed replacements are provided for in the Fiscal Year 1965 budget presentation.

b. Second, they briefed me on the outcome of conversations they have had with the Pentagon about the possibility of providing guards for CIA domestic buildings and installations in case of emergency. We agreed that this should be offered to Mr. Kirkpatrick's Emergency Planning Committee as a policy matter before we proceed further and formally with the Pentagon.

8. Jack Earman advised that he preferred not to consider [REDACTED] for his staff at this time due to his physical condition, and he also would prefer to have a general administrative type rather than [REDACTED] of the Office of Personnel. (I have asked [REDACTED] to look into this further.)

9. General Carter buzzed me to inquire if we had [REDACTED] vacancies. I told him that we did. He confided that he had in mind trying to induce [REDACTED] who is retiring, to take a job with the Agency.

10. I talked to John Tietjen about [REDACTED] with the idea of finding out whether he might be an appropriate nominee for the Inspector General's staff. John said that it would be a couple of weeks before he would know for sure just what would be involved in the surgery which [REDACTED] will apparently require.
